

Waging Nonviolence

People-Powered News and Analysis

Anatomy of an Occupation

Did the planners of Occupy Wall Street really have a plan?

Nathan Schneider

Why should planning matter to a journalist?

Tahrir Square,
January 2011

Fletcher Summer Institute,
June 2011

Something was in the air...

Madison, Wisconsin,
February 2011

Plaza del Sol, Madrid
May 15, 2011

Anonymous A99
June 14, 2011

March on Wall Street
May 12, 2011

Planning for the unplanned

Freedom Plaza • Washington, D.C. • October 6, 2011

Concert and rally at noon to kick off massive sustained occupation and nonviolent civil resistance to rampant corporatism and militarism.

Join the October 2011 Coalition, individuals and groups demanding real peace with social, economic, and environmental justice and an end to all U.S. wars.

October2011.org • info@October2011.org

October 2011 movement
c. April, 2011

NYC General Assembly
c. August 2, 2011

Adbusters calls for
#occupywallstreet, July 13, 2011

How the demand became a process

October 2011 movement
studies Gene Sharp

Adbusters calls for
#occupywallstreet, July 13, 2011

Direct democracy at OWS (OccupyTogether.org poster)

On the ground and through the web

Occupation of Zuccotti Park
September 17, 2011

“Bat signal” over
Brooklyn Bridge

NYPD reacts

Occupy Everything

Obama seems to call inequality
“the defining issue of our time”

Occupations spread throughout the country

Wave of DHS-coordinated evictions

From occupations to campaigns

Occupy Our Homes
anti-foreclosure, anti-eviction

InterOccupy
conference call network

Occupy the Courts against Citizens United

Creating a counter-narrative with days of action

Understanding this movement means understanding how it plans

Your presenter

Tompkins Square Park, August 13, 2011
Photo by Bob Arihood

Waging Nonviolence

People-Powered News and Analysis

Nathan Schneider
nathan@wagingnonviolence.org
<http://wagingnonviolence.org>