

People Power: The Study of Strategic Nonviolent Resistance

Sept. 6 - Nov. 1, 2018

A free online course offered jointly by the International Center on Nonviolent Conflict and the International Institute for Peace, Rutgers University

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This interactive course is designed to provide a multidisciplinary and in-depth perspective on civilian-based movements and campaigns that defend and obtain basic rights and justice around the world with the use of nonviolent tactics and strategies.

We will look at issues of political power, effectiveness of nonviolent resistance, the role of skills in civil resistance, strategies and tactics, phenomenon of backfire, and dilemma actions. We will also consider themes such as gender dynamics in civil resistance, anti-corruption movements, nonviolent struggles against exploitive industries, violent flank in civil resistance and political transitions.

The course will be moderated by outstanding civil resistance scholars.

For more information, and to apply, visit: bit.ly/ICNCRutgers18

The deadline to apply is August 26, 2018

*High-performing participants will be eligible to apply for ICNC grant-supported initiatives for educators and practitioners

*Up to 2 graduate credits are available from Rutgers University, Newark Graduate School for a fee.

TESTIMONIAL

"I got courage for our resistance as I learnt many new tactics, strategies and cases and got to know participants who were in similar struggles to ours. I recommend the course and the Center to everyone!"

-ICNC Online Course Participant

Visit www.nonviolent-conflict.org to learn more about ICNC. For more information, email academicinitiative@nonviolent-conflict.org